The mission of Center for Human Services is to change lives and build futures through programs that strengthen and support youth and families.
Letter From The Executive Director

What a wonderful year 2011/2012 was for Center for Human Services (CHS)! Highlighted by dynamic partnerships, an even stronger connection to our community, new initiatives and programs and the expansion of services, we are accomplishing our mission more effectively than ever before.

When I reflect on the last year, one of our agency values comes to mind: Partnerships. In the pages that follow, you will find our shared achievements. At CHS we are delighted to work with amazing partners. We could not change lives without the continued support of an active Board of Directors and Board of Trustees. We couldn’t build futures without the volunteers that give of their time and energy to work in our programs. We couldn’t help families without the willingness of our finding partners to collaborate in our good works in order to more effectively reach people throughout Stanislaus County. We hope you will be as proud as we are of all that we continue to accomplish together.

After 42 years serving Stanislaus County, we are excited to celebrate our continued growth. In the following pages, we share stories and outcomes that will help you understand the impact our work has throughout your community.

I’m also proud to be able to share with you our financial position. CHS continues to remain fiscally strong and I’m pleased to share that we finished last year in a stronger financial position than the year before and continue to work hard to be good stewards of the resources entrusted to us.

As we look to the future, we feel confident that CHS is poised to meet the ever-changing needs of our community. We look forward to partnering with you to continue to fulfill our mission to change lives and build futures through programs that strengthen and support youth and families.

Sincerely,

Cindy Duenas
Executive Director

Donor Appreciation Receptions

For the first time, CHS invited several donors to attend private Donor Appreciation Receptions. These events created a wonderful opportunity to personally thank our donors for their contributions and share more about what CHS does throughout Stanislaus County.

Edible Extravaganza

Center for Human Services celebrated its 26th Annual Edible Extravaganza. Nearly 1,200 people attended this signature event which featured some of the best restaurants, caterers, bakers, confectioners, vinters, beverage purveyors and local growers that our area has to offer.

Children First

CHS was proud to present the 2012 Children First Distinguished Leadership Award to the Matt and Barbara Bruno Family. The Children First Award was created in 2000 to honor people in our community who support services for children and families in Stanislaus County at extraordinary levels. The Bruno family’s innovative leadership, philanthropy and volunteerism exemplify the qualities this award was meant to honor. This year CHS hosted the Children First Award Event at The Gallo Center for the Arts.

Bunko

CHS recently started hosting regional fundraising events to raise awareness and support for our programs located throughout Stanislaus County. We were proud to host our 1st Annual Bunko Box Lunch Social in Oakdale. This event was hosted by the Oakdale Champions, a group of community members dedicated to supporting CHS - Oakdale Family Resource and Counseling Center. We hope you’ll join us next year!

Exciting New Things

In 2011-2012, CHS had several new and exciting things happen. CHS was proud to open the Patterson Teen Center at its new location. Also, several Family Resource Centers hosted Project Prom which made gently used prom attire and accessories available to youth throughout the county. CHS launched a community garden in Oakdale and Burnside Body Shop gifted a car to a young adult living at Pathways, our shelter for youth experiencing homelessness.

Harvesting Futures

Harvesting Futures’ harvest events resulted in over 2,000 lbs of fruit that was delivered to area food banks. The Harvesting Futures project also received funding to continue work into the 2012-2013 year. CHS will host more harvest events with youth and adult volunteers, as well as develop a business plan to market and sell merchandise created by youth, using donated product from local farmers. The label for these products will be called Random Foods.
Center for Human Services (CHS) was established as a local 501 (c)(3) non-profit in 1970 to serve youth and families. Currently, CHS serves tens of thousands of children, individuals and families annually in the Central Valley, primarily Stanislaus County, through seven core program areas.

At age 15, Joe came to Hutton House after running away from his foster home. He and his mother had lived on the streets most of his life. When he was 12 his mother simply disappeared. Joe’s mother had a history of substance abuse, including alcohol and methamphetamines, and when she left him he became a dependant of the state.

Joe had first used marijuana around age three when mom gave it to him to “mellow him out”. He became a habitual user of pot by the time he was 8 years old. He had followed in his mother’s footsteps and was facing a lifetime of challenges. After being abandoned, Joe spent the next three years in several foster care homes and eventually learned that his father, who Joe hadn’t seen since birth, was in Modesto. Joe ran away from his foster homes several times, trying to locate his father, and was eventually picked up by police and brought to Hutton House. Staff at Hutton House were able to locate his father who was residing in a convalescent hospital, legally blind from diabetes. Because Joe’s father was unable to provide for his son, Joe returned to foster care. He continued to run away in an attempt to be close to his father. He came frequently to Hutton House for support.

Shortly after he turned 18, Joe’s father died from the effects of years of substance abuse. Without ties to the community and without both parents, Joe left the area to create a life of his own. He made one last visit to Hutton House to thank the staff for being there to help support him through his many challenges. Hutton House staff often think of Joe and hopes that he was able to create the life for himself that had filled his dreams as a child.

TAKING BACK Her Neighborhood

Guadalupe Rivera is a 52 year old woman who was born in Mexico and migrated to the United States when she was a teenager. Guadalupe and her husband settled in South Modesto where they raised their 3 children. She has devoted her life to her children and tending to her home. Many would say that she is a loving and caring woman. In Guadalupe’s mind, she had created her own story about her community that affected her sense of well-being. Beyond her home, she perceived her community as a place of fear and disparity. Her focus on the delinquency, lack of sidewalks, graffiti, drugs, and dilapidated homes prevented her from involving herself in her neighborhood. Although she was a caring person, there was a hesitation to open and establish relationships with others because she believed that she could be betrayed or that her family would be put in jeopardy. Some time ago, Guadalupe was out tending to her plants when she noticed some young men burglarizing a home across the street. She knew they were up to no good but was paralyzed by fear and was overcome by a sense of powerlessness.

Recently, Guadalupe began to attend community gatherings that were being held in the neighborhood by a local community group called Manos Unidas. Although she was hesitant to deeply engage in the group, Guadalupe soon found herself building relationships with other residents and taking strides in reclaiming her power. Guadalupe’s personal story about her community started to change as she began to discover the gifts of the community and the potential for change as people come together. Guadalupe is now an active member of Manos Unidas and sees her community differently. She no longer lives in fear and now feels that she has the potential to bring about change. She also now hosts community gatherings at her home and has participated in many events that have positively impacted the community.

Manos Unidas is a community group organized in South Modesto to build the capacity of people who live there to address their own emotional health and well-being. Stay tuned for more about CHS and our role in Manos Unidas in our next issue of Center Line, Center for Human Services’ newsletter. I Love The Work We Do

Since I first learned about Center for Human Services (CHS) I have been a huge supporter and advocate for the work that we do and the values and mission that we stand behind. Everyday I am blessed with the opportunity to grow, not only as a professional in this field, but as a person, and I am learning new things every day.

This past year, I was presented with an emotional challenge and learning experience unlike any I had experienced before. A young woman and her two children came into our Family Resource Center (FRC). After our initial assessment, FRC Staff learned she and her children had been subjected to severe abuse which culminated in an exceptionally traumatic event, leaving her family emotionally broken and in need of support. She had not spoken to anyone about the events that brought her to our FRC. She was detached, overwhelmed, and not sure where to turn. She felt weighted down by sadness and hopelessness.

I quickly turned to the CHS counseling department for help. In no time at all, CHS clinicians called my client and began to assess both her children. In a matter of days my client was able to speak with a clinician. The professionalism, respect, empathy, and prompt response that was shown to this family by CHS was so meaningful, and has truly impacted their lives. My client was, at times, uncertain about how she felt about receiving counseling, but with the availability and empathy shown to her, she became open and ready to begin services. Each of the counselors assigned to the case have gone above and beyond to support this family and make sure that they are getting the services that they need. For instance, one member of this family called in a panic after receiving news about her abuser. A clinician stopped what she was doing to walk this client through her panic and anxiety, to come to a place of understanding. The support shown by this clinician is one of many ways that our agency supports families and builds resilience by teaching coping skills and strength.

Since meeting this family, they have continued to participate in counseling services, parenting classes and continue to stay involved and connected to the FRC. This young woman has started to me on multiple occasions that she feels stronger than ever before. Talking and working with the clinicians and staff at CHS has changed her life and has empowered her to move forward and strengthen her family. Each time I meet with her, I see a light of hope in her eyes that had not been there before.

I am grateful for all of the help and support from CHS - Counseling Clinic and will always remember the kindness, respect and promptness shown to this family by Center for Human Services. I’m so proud to work here.

"I'm proud to be associated with an agency that not only displays integrity in service but in its fiscal responsibility as well. Center for Human Services consistently achieves the highest opinion possible on its annual independent financial audit. This serves as a testament to the agency's dedication in holding itself accountable to its donors, grantors and community."

Wendy L. Prather, CPA
CHS Board of Directors // Treasurer
Donor Highlight

Dr. Jamie McCready has been a donor with Center for Human Services (CHS) for over a decade. When asked what makes her want to give to CHS she shared that it was the work done by CHS Staff. “The openness, the motivation and the continuous drive to make the world a better place. It’s in every employee. From someone I meet at the front desk to someone I meet at the top. Everyone shares that attitude. That makes me want to be connected.”

Dr. McCready also acknowledges that the agency’s outcomes are really persuasive. When asked about the work she sees being done in the community she stated, “I only have a certain number of dollars to invest every year and I have a lot of passions. I ask myself, does this make a difference in the world in the way that is really meaningful? CHS has a low overhead rate so I know money is going to services and then I look at the outcomes and I see the difference they are making. CHS is putting money into programs and the programs are working.”

Dr. McCready gives to CHS in a variety of ways. She writes checks, gives in-kind and she and her husband, Robert Yockey, have even written CHS into their Trust.

“When Robert and I did our Trust we decided to put in a few donations. It’s important to feel that your life has had meaning. We asked ourselves, ‘How does one leave a footprint in the world?’ The answer: by giving what you have to someone who will continue to change the world. We don’t have all that much money but it will be a little bit of us left behind.”

Lastly, Dr. McCready loves to talk to people about CHS. Sometimes the best way to give is to be an ambassador and share about the good work of others. Dr. McCready said, “Whether it’s my family, people I work with, or my neighbors, I love to talk about CHS. I think there is a lot more to be proud of in our community than people know. To me, when I talk about CHS, I’m showing people what can be done.”

Ways To Give...

Center for Human Services (CHS) is thankful for the many ways our community supports our mission to change lives and build futures through programs that strengthen and support youth and families. Here are some different ways you can support CHS:

Time

Become a volunteer in one of our many programs by lending a helping hand to our staff, sitting on a fundraising committee, or joining one of our active Boards.

Treasure

Provide monetary support by giving through the Annual Fund, sponsoring or attending a special event like Edible Extravaganza, donating in-kind goods or supplies or participating by making a planned gift.

Talent

Offer to share one of your talents and create teachable moments with the people we serve and our employees. If you have special skills and talents, share them with CHS by helping teach a class, providing general maintenance and repairs at our facilities and more.
